THE ASTREA

In the 17th Century, the writer Aphra Behn was employed as a spy under Charles II, acquiring the code-name Astrea. She went on to write under this pseudonym throughout her life, before she was laid to rest in 1689 at Westminster Abbey. The Astrea is the perfect space for meetings and intimate dinners for up to 14 guests.

THE BOOTHROYD

Taking influence from the Secret Service on popular culture. In Ian Fleming's Bond books, Major Boothroyd is Q, head of the fictional research and development division at MI5. As a name, Boothroyd calls to mind quality, elegance and tradition. The Boothroyd can accommodate up to 120 guests standing and 100 for a seated dinner.

THE SID

Inspired by Sidney Reilly, the British spy, employed by the British Secret Service at the turn of the century. Reilly is widely thought to have been the prototype for the character of James Bond in Ian Fleming's novels of the 50's and 60's. Classic and memorable, the name links us to Westminster's history of undercover operations. The Sid is the perfect space for hosting a standing reception of up to 40 guests, as well as 40 for a seated event.
