THE ASTREA

In the 17th century, writer and spy Aphra Behn operated under the code name Astrea, serving King Charles II. She carried this alias into her literary career before being laid to rest in Westminster Abbey, just a stone's throw away. Inspired by its enigmatic namesake, this room exudes intrigue and elegance, offering 43 square meters of refined space. An ideal setting for gatherings of up to 14 guests.

THE BOOTHROYD

Inspired by Major Boothroyd, known as “Q” in Ian Fleming’s Bond novels, The Boothroyd pays tribute to the innovative spirit of the fictional MI5 division, just steps from our real-life neighbours in Westminster. Spanning 111 square meters, this versatile room accommodates up to 120 guests with six configurable layouts, ideal for both corporate functions and private events. With cutting-edge amenities and a sophisticated design, The Boothroyd is a dynamic space where creativity and functionality come together.

THE SID

Inspired by Sidney Reilly, the legendary 19th-century British spy and the real-life inspiration for James Bond, The Sid pays homage to Westminster’s deep ties to secrecy. Classic and memorable, its name reflects a legacy of undercover operations. With 34 square meters of space, the room comfortably accommodates standing receptions of up to 45 guests. Blending historic intrigue with modern amenities, The Sid offers an atmosphere as distinctive as its namesake
