A Uniquely Historic Location

The Westin London City is located on Queenhithe, a natural inlet known for being the place where Alfred the Great arrived in 886 to rebuild the city after it was abandoned by the Romans. It took the name of Queenhithe when Queen Matilda was granted the dues from the dock in the early 12th century. There are many hidden gems from the Roman times including at our Heavenly Spa by Westin, where we discovered archaeological remains of the Huggin Hill Roman public bathhouse from the first century AD.

In 1666, during the Great Fire of London, King Charles II made a notable visit to Queenhithe Dock. This occurred because the sailing ships could no longer reach the docks safely from the sea. In lieu of a sea landing, King Charles II chose to disembark at Queenhithe to assess the destruction caused by the fire and to offer his assistance in the fire-fighting efforts.

In 2014, to commemorate the location, 4C Group along with the Heritage Lottery Fund and City Corporation backed the making of a 30-metre long mosaic to cover the wall of the dock, displaying its remarkable layers of history from Roman times to the present. Queenhithe Dock is the only remaining Anglo-Saxon dock in the world and it’s a unique location that is a part of London’s birth, thronged in ancient times with traded goods, boats, and people.

A team of artists and trained volunteers worked to create the mosaic, guided by artists Tessa Hunkin, Jo Thorpe, and Maria Palmieri. Over 160 panels were made in the 30-metre timeline, each one symbolising a significant aspect of Queenhithe’s history since Roman times through important events and characters and the nature of the river itself. Included in the borders of the mosaic are date relevant found ceramics collected from the River Thames.
