LEARN ABOUT SAKE WITH US...

In general, there are five basic types of sake.
Each requires different brewing methods and a different percentage of rice milling "seimaibuai".

Karakuchi	Dry in flavor
Amakuchi	Sweet in flavor
Daiginjo-shu	Sake brewed with rice milled so that no more than 50% of grain remains
Ginjo - shu	Sake brewed with rice milled so that no more than 60% of grain remains
Futsu-shu	Normal sake any sake that is not junmai-shu, honjozo, ginjo-shu or daiginjo
Ginjo-shu	Sake brewed with rice milled so that no more than 60% of the grain remains
Honjozo	Sake to which a small amount of distilled alcohol is added
Junmai-shu	Sake brewed with only rice, water and koji -- no additives
Genshu	Undiluted sake (most are slightly diluted)
Namazake	Sake that has not been pasteurized
Nigori	Sake that is unfiltered
Seimai-buai	The degree to which rice has been polished before brewing
Toji	The Head Brewer
