

IN 1949, the 'Bombay Prohibition Act' was passed and has never been repealed. In the early days, there were Aunty Bars, secret back rooms where modest Goan ladies sold Feni liquor, occasionally paying a hefty haffa to the police. A boiled-egg vendor stationed nearby – a clue for those in the know. Over time, restaurants would set aside a place where permit-holders could get a drink. These special places came to be known as permit rooms.
