RICHARD CORRIGAN

Awarded two Michelin stars, author of two recipe books, and a chef for both the Queen and Barack Obama, Richard Corrigan is a familiar face on radio and television. He has notably won the Great British Menu three times and is a regular guest judge on the popular BBC series.

The son of a farmer, Richard's passion for seasonal food is matched only by his enthusiasm for ingredients sourced from Britain and Ireland. His approach is defined by a commitment to good hospitality and excellent food, prioritising local suppliers and independent producers over large corporations.

In 2005, Richard purchased and refurbished Bentley's Oyster Bar and Grill, restoring it to its former glory. He went on to open Corrigan's Mayfair in 2008. In 2014, he embarked on a deeply personal venture by acquiring and revitalising Virginia Park Lodge, an Irish country estate and the venue where he married his wife, Maria. In 2019, Chef Corrigan returned to London to open Daffodil Mulligan, bringing a taste of Ireland to Shoreditch.
